Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Excerpt from The Obligations of the American Scholar to His Country and the World: An Address, Delivered Before the Philaethan Society of Hanover College, September 28th, 1841 Gentlemen of the Philaethan Society, and respected Audience: Mutation characterizes the condition of our world. The age in which our lot is cast contributes its proportion to the progress of that revolution which affects what is sacred as well as what is secular; and which reaches both the sentiments of individuals and the policy of States. These reciprocally act upon each other. To this revolutionary process our own country is not a stranger. That remarkable political and moral phenomenon, - the Declaration of our Independence, - which proclaimed the birth of a nation, destined to make developments and to exemplify principles of deep interest to man, was one, and a commanding one, of those events that engage attention, awaken thought, and rouse the mind to action. It has been followed by results which concern the future and embrace interests not limited by narrow bounds. The principles of that event pertain...
