Excerpt: . . . The following is not fully dated. LETTER XXVIII. . From Mr. C. Wesley to his Sister. Bristol, April 29. Dear Sister, YOU may fear I am in the land where all things are forgotten, by my long silence: but I have been only passing between this place and London, without settling at either. Most probably I shall now stay here long enough to hear from you by Phill, if she is not discouraged by my unpunctuality. You must make my peace with her, that she may inform me how you do. Methinks I could be gladder to ask you myself in person; but I do not yet see a way opened. However, I would not have you over sure that I shall not make an elbow to Barnstaple by and by. My heart is full of desires after your happiness. Love and gratitude to God and man, constrains me to wish your welfare as my own; but God only can remove that mountain of prejudice which is in the way. I speak not this to upbraid you. No; was it not for your great affection to me, you would be I 2 much. much more prejudiced than you are. But, by nature we are averse to the things of God. We are born unbelievers; and have no faith till we are born again. This is a hard saying (and yet a kind one) that you, my dear sister, are not yet born again....
